

COELHO'S INTERVIEW, SELF-REPORTED.

ON THE MIDWAY—Yes, Mr. Hanna, I am that Brilliant Hawaiian Leader.

THE ARBUCKLES AND THE TRUST

How Their War is Affecting the Prices of Sugar and Coffee.

NEW YORK, June 1.—The Journal of Commerce says: The Woolson Spice Company, which is the coffee end of the American Sugar Refining Company, has issued a circular granting grocers an extra allowance of half a cent per pound on all purchases of Lion brand coffees between May 28 and July 1. It is supposed that this extra allowance has something to do with the Arbuckle circular issued last July in which it was decided to allow an extra allowance of half a cent per pound on all increased orders for Arisio coffee over the amount taken the previous season. It is understood that the Woolson people believe the Arbuckles have been allowing the extra rebate, increase or no increase. It is understood that the Arbuckles will immediately follow the Woolson circular with one of similar purpose, but they have taken their most direct action in the form of a reduction of 15 points in their sugar prices. The National Refinery immediately followed with a similar cut, but restored prices within a few minutes. Interesting developments are expected within the next few days. Regarding the situation the Tribune says Arbuckle Brothers have made a 15 point reduction in refined sugar, bringing the price down to 5.40 cents a pound. The report that the Woolson Spice Company has reduced the price of its package coffee a half a cent a pound

IS ONE OF THE BONAPARTES NOW LIVING IN HONOLULU?

When Joseph Bonaparte, the ex-King of Spain, resided in the United States he assumed the title of Count de Surveliers, and for some time resided on a farm just below the city of Philadelphia, and he wedded Annette Savage, a beautiful Quaker girl, the mistress of the place. Afterwards he resided in Barbortown, N. J., and on a tract of about 150,000 acres of land, which he owned in Lewis county, in the State of New York. Two children were the issue of this relation with Annette, both of them girls. After the ex-King returned to France, Annette, his "American wife," married Joseph de la Folie, a young Frenchman, and they lived in Watertown, N. Y. The surviving daughter of the ex-King was known as Charlotte de la Folie, and in 1836 she married Colonel Gerbulon Hoyle Benton, who was the owner of the noted Rossie lead mines of Northern New York. He was charmed with the romantic origin of the handsome and accomplished Charlotte. Four children were born to them. In 1869 Colonel Benton, with his wife, visited Paris, and, through the celebrated American dentist, Dr. Evans, were introduced to the Emperor Napoleon III., who, on looking at Mrs. Benton, promptly said, "I recognize you as a Napoleon." An Imperial decree was issued which made legitimate the union of the ex-King Joseph and Annette Savage, and she was declared to be a first cousin of the Emperor, and her son, by Joseph de la Folie, was placed in one of the French military schools. The New York Sun, which publishes an account of these incidents in the life of the ex-King Joseph Bonaparte, and of Joseph and Charlotte de la Folie, says of the latter: "Four children were born to them, of whom two reside in Philadelphia, one in Honolulu and one in Italy."

The position. Smith's resignation may be tendered to the President within a few days. The London Sun publishes a sensational story to the effect that General Botha has arrived at Standerton, and is communicating by telegraph with Mr. Kruger, through The Netherlands government, appealing to Mr. Kruger to sue for peace. Lord Kitchener is said to have given Botha permission to adopt this course. The Sun further hears that 10,000 Zulus have gone on the warpath, owing to Boer raids in Zululand.

LEPER HIDDEN BY DOWIEITES

Believed to Have Been Present at Several Big Meetings.

CHICAGO, May 31.—Health officials are looking for John Stewart of 1362 North Washtenaw avenue, who is said to be afflicted with leprosy, and is now in hiding under treatment of "Dr." John Alexander Dowie. The Stewart family is said to have come originally from the Sandwich Islands, where the supposed leper was born. Mrs. Stewart, John's mother, is a follower of Dowie, and believes that Dowie can cure him. It is rumored that Dowie has allowed Stewart to mingle freely with the congregations at big meetings held in the Auditorium and Coliseum, and he went to Waukegan yesterday. "The Dowieites have concealed the man," declared Secretary Pritchard of the Health Department today. "We learned of it several days ago, and have been quietly at work to ascertain whether the report was true. In some way steps will be taken. I do not know. One fact is certain—it is within the province of this department to protect the public from contamination, and everything will be done to accomplish that end."

USED KNIFE TO MURDER

Enraged Japanese Seriously Cuts a Sailor.

ASSAILANT NOW IN PRISON CELL

Asai Objected to Drinking Party in Adjoining Room and Wounds Two Brothers.

A terrible cutting affray occurred in the room of a Japanese in Kakaako yesterday morning, from the results of which, Kawano, a Japanese fisherman, lies wounded at the hospital, with a deep, ugly gash in his thigh; his brother is at the police station with his right hand bandaged to close up wounds which almost severed the forefinger, and Asai, a bull-necked coolie, who hails from the north of Japan, is confined in a cell, charged with assault with a deadly weapon. The weapon is an ugly looking knife used mainly by Japanese for the cleaning of fish. It was buried in the right thigh of Kawano, lodging between two bones, and was thrust with such force that the point was broken off, leaving about an inch of the blade in the flesh of the wounded man. This little piece of steel was extracted by Dr. Wood, and is now, with the rest of the knife, at the police station, to be used as evidence against the wielder of the murderous weapon. The would-be murderer is of a type of Japanese who hail from a portion of the empire where the inhabitants are heavy of intellect, and of a mongrel breed, resulting from intermarriages with the Ailu and with non-descript people from near-by shores. These people are mainly of Ailu blood, as shown by the heavy mane of hair which they wear. They are physically of a brute strength which is seldom found in the inhabitants of the South. Asai is a powerful fellow, and only the combined efforts of five or six of the friends of Kawano prevented the enraged man from burying his knife in the breast of the wounded man. The stories of all the witnesses to the affair, taken one by one, are almost alike, and each charged Asai with having attempted to murder their companion. On the other hand, Asai maintains that he was the man who had suffered, and that he had been assaulted by the others because he was from a different province from their own. He claims that he did not use a knife, but he is at a loss to explain why it was, if he was assaulted, one man should be lying in the hospital with a gaping wound in his leg, and another with his hand slashed by the blade, especially as all the others are the best of friends. Yesterday forenoon Kawano, his younger brother, Hamasake, and another Japanese, were in the room of the Kawanos drinking sake and singing songs. Most of the men are sailors, and had just come in from their trips to the other islands. A Japanese named Nakamura, who was also in the room, and who was also drinking, to enjoy the hospitality and the liquor which the Kawanos were dispensing with a free hand. He was a sailor on the Iwalani, and had just returned from Kauai. The Kawanos are sailors on the steamer John Cummins. While they were singing and drinking each other's health, Asai, who lives in an adjoining room, became enraged. He was not friendly with the others, and therefore was not invited to come in and assist in lowering the liquor in the demijohn. According to the statements made at the police station by the members of the drinking party, Asai came to their door and demanded in a loud voice that they desist from their singing and keep quiet, as he wanted to sleep. The Kawanos immediately replied that they were in their own room, and would do as they liked, and then tried to open the door, but the merry party had taken the precaution to lock it. The man put his shoulder to the door, and the lock immediately yielded. Asai rushed into the room, and before the others were aware of his intentions, he grabbed Kawano, the elder, by the throat with one hand and struck him in the face with the other. Kawano's friends came to the rescue, and after much scuffling, Asai was given a few hard knocks, and was thrust out of the room. Asai muttered a threat to get even and went to his own apartment. The party soon settled down to their drinking bout when suddenly Asai rushed into the room wielding a fish-cleaning knife. He made for Kawano, the elder, who grabbed his wrist and prevented the weapon from being plunged into his breast. Asai's arm was thrust downward, and when opposite Kawano's thigh, he regained possession of his hand and wrist and thrust the knife full into the other's flesh. The blade was worked backward and forward until the end snapped off and the knife was then withdrawn by the now infuriated Japanese. Before he could make another thrust Kawano, the younger, caught the blade in his right hand and held on until his forefinger was almost severed from his
